About People Experiencing Homelessness

Experiencing homelessness in one of the richest nations is proven to adversely affect three components that create our self-value which are; self-perception, social comparison, and reflected appraisals. For instance, this is the way we perceive others as perceiving us. As you can imagine, this mental portrait doesn't hold up well to daily problems that people experiencing homeless face. Poverty stricken individuals have less confidence in their own abilities. As many state about feeling unsafe, uncared for, and invisible.

Everyday people experiencing homelessness face many challenges, both emotionally and physically, which that can make it even more difficult for them to get back on their feet. If the basic needs food, water, clothing, sleep, and shelter are not being met it can be nearly be impossible to function adequately. These are the bare necessities for anyone's survival of an individual. There are many barriers that come with people experiencing homelessness. One example being, not having a permanent address as this can be an issue for people experiencing homelessness, when they are trying to attain employment or other types of income. Other barriers that people have are, people experiencing homelessness are receiving tickets for minor offences, organizations do not have sufficient funding, unaffordable housing, etc. As you can see these barriers can make it difficult for anyone to get off the streets.

Why are People Experiencing Homelessness?

- Lack of affordable housing
 - Evictions, foreclosures, etc.
- Lack of affordable health care
 - ex: Medical bills - Bankruptcy
- Poverty
 - Low wages, food insecurity, lay-offs, etc.
- Mental health and physical disabilities
- Addiction and lack of services
- Domestic violence
- Lack of support networks
- Loss of a loved one or divorce
- Natural disasters (i.e. floods, fires, hurricanes)

Why it is important to not refer to a homeless person as a "homeless" individual?

The word "homeless" comes with a whole lot of harmful stereotypes, assumptions, and accusations. What many people don't understand is that homelessness is much more complex and complicated. That is why we recognize these individuals as "people experiencing homelessness." As the people-first language puts a person before a diagnosis. For example, instead of labeling someone "crippled" we would say "person with a disability." As we are describing something a person is going through rather than defining them by it. This type of language humanizes and values the dignity and worth of a person.

"Homelessness is not a choice, but rather a journey that many find themselves in." – Asa Don Brown

"When life gets hard, try to remember: the life you complain about is only a dream to some people." – Anonymous

"Whether one is rich or poor, educated or illiterate, religious or nonbelieving, man or woman, black, white, or brown, we are all the same. Physically, emotionally, and mentally, we are all equal. We all share basic needs for food, shelter, safety, and love. We all aspire to happiness and we all shun suffering. Each of us has hopes, worries, fears, and dreams. Each of us wants the best for our family and loved ones. We all experience pain when we suffer loss and joy when we achieve what we seek. On this fundamental level, religion, ethnicity, culture, and language make no difference." - Dalai Lama

TYPES OF HOMELESSNESS

Definitions or Terms

Chronic Homelessness: is used to describe people who have experienced homelessness for at least a year — or repeatedly — while struggling with a disabling condition such as a mental illness, substance use disorder, or physical disability.

Episodic Homelessness: refers to individuals, often with disabling conditions, who are currently homeless and have experienced three or more episodes of homelessness in the past year.

Transitional Homelessness: is defined as affecting a person that is going through a major life change or catastrophic event. Those life events could include losing a job, a medical condition, divorce, domestic abuse, and more. People experiencing transitional homelessness have been homeless for less than a year.

Hidden Homelessness: where individuals have no guarantee of long-term housing and no immediate prospects for acquiring it. They often stay with friends or relatives because they don't have other options, or in a hotel when provided by charitable organizations.

WHAT TO DO WHEN YOU WANT TO HELP SOMEONE EXPERIENCING HOMELESSNESS:

- Be informed, homelessness comes in all forms, shapes, and sizes. Everyone has a story, no one individual is the same.
- Get to know the people living on the streets in your area and treat them like any neighbor. We all need some human interaction and connection.
- Exercise empathy, remembering the humanity of each person you see, treat each person with dignity and respect.
 - Remember that even small acts of kindness can have huge positive repercussions in lives of others.
- If a person requests medical help or is unconscious, call 911 immediately. However, make it clear that is a call for medical and not a police emergency.
- Familiarize yourself with homeless services and providers in your area.

KEEP IN MIND:

- Even those without homes have the same rights as everyone else.
- These people experiencing homelessness are there because they have nowhere to go, not because they are trying to be a nuisance.
- Avoid perpetuating stereotypes, stigma, and myths about people experiencing homelessness.
- Many organizations are working together to help people experiencing homelessness. One thing you can keep in mind as a business owner is you can find an organization to help support, and ask them what they need.
- Advocate within your circle of influence to help make things better for our neighbors who are experiencing homelessness. This may help your business community as well.

Business Resource Guide: The Basic Do's and Do Not's

The Do's -

- Act with compassion look them in the eyes, smiling, and offering kindness at a time when they may need it the most.
- Start building a relationship, as more positive interactions will outweigh the negative interactions.
- If someone is being disruptive, homeless or not, try to de-escalate the situation if comfortable.
- If someone is threatening harm to self or others, acting recklessly, having delusions, call 911 and ask for the Crisis Intervention team or ask for a trained mental health officer.
- Let people know your boundaries on your property. If people are doing something illegal and won't leave, call non-emergency police line.

The Do Not's -

- Don't assume people know your expectations.
- Don't assume everyone experiencing homelessness is addicted to drugs or alcohol.
 - Instead... understand that there are many paths to homelessness.
- Don't avoid eye contact when you encounter a person experiencing homelessness.
 - Instead... get to know them and enter a conversation.
- Don't assume that people want to remain homeless because of stereotypes that they are lazy, must be an addict, or they are too proud to ask for help.
- Avoid giving out sugary foods as most people experiencing homelessness have no access to dental care. As well as poses a health hazard for those with diabetes or underlying conditions.

HOW SHOULD I RESPOND...?

How should I respond when a person experiencing homelessness on the streets asks me for money?

- Giving money is a personal choice.
 - When someone asks you for money, you can politely refuse, give them some money, or offer to help them in some other way.
 - If you don't feel comfortable giving cash you can offer other things like gift cards, water, hygiene kits, snacks, etc.
 - If you don't feel comfortable giving money to a neighbor who is experiencing homelessness, it is important to still acknowledge and treat them respectfully.
 - So, a good response can be, "I'm sorry, I do not have any money on me." or even "I'm sorry, I don't ever carry cash on me."

What should I do if a person experiencing homelessness is experiencing a psychiatric emergency or acting robustly in my business?

- Avoid criminalization, if possible, as it can lead to further complications. It can prolong a person's homelessness and trauma.
 - Call 911, and request medical assistance.
 - As well as, 911 contact the Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) if in need of de-escalation of the situation.

What to do if someone is sleeping/loitering at your front door...

- Establish a friendly relationship, introduce yourself and ask the person's name. Can ask them if they are in need of any assistance.
- Politely ask them to leave using empathetic language to help in future interactions.
- You should let them know where they can be, as opposed to only where they cannot be.
- If they are not cooperative, tell them you may have to call the police, but that you would rather not.
